

The Road Travelled: Surviving and Flourishing 25 years on Friday 22nd June 2018

University College Birmingham, McIntyre House, 2 Holland Street, Birmingham B3 1PW

10:00 - 10:45   Welcome from the Chair(s) and introduction to the day	00:45 00:45	Decistration
The changing face of Further Education: new opportunities for LRC and Libraries, Nick Poole, CILIP  CILIP has members in more than 20 industry sectors. Very few of these have seen more or more rapid change than that experienced by the Further Education sector in recent years. This has profound implications for Learning Resource Centres and FE libraries. Drawing on the 2017  CILIP policy inquiry into Libraries in Further Education and the resulting advocacy framework 'FE Librarians deliver successful learning journeys Nick will explore how we can work together across the sector to ensure that librarians and information professionals are positioned not just to survive this transformation in FE provision, but to help guide it so that it delivers the best outcomes for students.  10:45 - 11:15  COFFEE AND MEET THE SPONSORS  BREAKOUT SESSIONS  Choose from:  1A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant  Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University  What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.	09:15 - 09:45	Registration
The changing face of Further Education: new opportunities for LRC and Libraries, Nick Poole, CILIP  CILIP has members in more than 20 industry sectors. Very few of these have seen more or more rapid change than that experienced by the Further Education sector in recent years. This has profound implications for Learning Resource Centres and FE libraries. Drawing on the 2017  CILIP policy inquiry into Libraries in Further Education and the resulting advocacy framework 'FE Librarians deliver successful learning journeys Nick will explore how we can work together across the sector to ensure that librarians and information professionals are positioned not just to survive this transformation in FE provision, but to help guide it so that it delivers the best outcomes for students.  10:45 - 11:15  COFFEE AND MEET THE SPONSORS  BREAKOUT SESSIONS  Choose from:  1A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant  Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticesh for Learning Resource Centres and FE libraries. Drawing on the 2017 CILIP policy inquiry into Libraries in Further Education and the resulting advocacy framework 'FE Librarians deliver successful learning journeys Nick will explore how we can work together across the sector to ensure that librarians and information professionals are positioned not just to survive this transformation in FE provision, but to help guide it so that it delivers the best outcomes for students.  10:45 - 11:15 COFFEE AND MEET THE SPONSORS BREAKOUT SESSIONS Choose from: 1A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP	10:00 – 10:45	The changing face of Further Education: new opportunities for LRC and Libraries, Nick Poole, CILIP  CILIP has members in more than 20 industry sectors. Very few of these have seen more or more rapid change than that experienced by the
BREAKOUT SESSIONS Choose from:  1A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP		for Learning Resource Centres and FE libraries. Drawing on the 2017 CILIP policy inquiry into Libraries in Further Education and the resulting advocacy framework 'FE Librarians deliver successful learning journeys', Nick will explore how we can work together across the sector to ensure that librarians and information professionals are positioned not just to survive this transformation in FE provision, but to help guide it so that it delivers the best outcomes for students.
Choose from:  1A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP
1A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP	11:15 – 11:45
Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP useful resources and websites along the way.  1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP 1B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP
What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?  1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP
1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield  The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP		What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.  1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP		1C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University
1D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP		The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP
		apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England
Hear about LARKIM trailblazer group and share your ideas about the promotion and development of apprenticeships, creating new pathways into the profession and building foundations for transferable skills.		Hear about LARKIM trailblazer group and share your ideas about the promotion and development of apprenticeships, creating new pathways

11:45 – 12:00	CHANGEOVER
12:00 – 12:30	PLENARY SESSION
.2.00	The importance of learning resource centres and library services in further education, Pat Brennan-Barratt, Principal, Northampton College
	Library services – and librarians and information professionals – play a critical role in supporting organisational goals and strategies. At Northampton College, the library staff have been a central force in creating a College-wide learning environment. The library provides support to students completing assignments and course work; helps deliver the study programme; helps secure good maths and English outcomes; provides reading materials and software to support courses; supports teaching staff; and helps students conduct research and pursue their search for knowledge.
12:30 - 12:40	MEET OUR DIAMOND SPONSOR, IS OXFORD
12.50 - 12.40	Tom Knightley, IS Oxford
12:40 - 13:30	LUNCH and meet our sponsors
13:30 – 14:10	PLENARY SESSION
13.30 - 14.10	How is your organisation developing its organisational digital capability? Corinne Walker, Oldham Sixth Form College and Scott Hibberson, Jisc
	Oldham Sixth Form College supported staff in the development of their digital capabilities by participating in a pilot of Jisc's discovery tool. In this session we'll review the tool, show how it can be adopted to support the development of digital capabilities, look at additional tools available from Jisc and learn how Jisc plans to develop the Discovery tool.
14:10 – 14:15	MEET OUR PLATINUM SPONSOR EBSCO
14.10 - 14.15	Sam Moss, EBSCO
14:15 – 14:25	CHANGEOVER
14:25 – 14:55	BREAKOUT SESSIONS
14.23 - 14.33	Choose from:
	2A: Let's make the statement "I can't do maths!" a thing of the past,
	Jonathan Longstaffe, Mathematics Consultant Jonathan is an experienced mathematics teacher, school leader and consultant. He will address a range of issues, articulating the importance of numeracy in a library resource centre context and recommending useful resources and websites along the way.
	2B: From FE to HE, Adam Fields, Oxford Brookes University
	What are the challenges faced by students transitioning from a further education environment into a university? How should we collaborate and liaise with HE providers? How should we engage with students to encourage them to reflect on the nature of university life and the research-led learning culture?
	2C: A new definition of information literacy, Jess Haigh, University of Huddersfield
	The Information Literacy Group of CILIP has reviewed and refined CILIP's definition of information literacy. In this session Jess will outline the new definition, exploring its implications in various contexts, and allowing time for delegates to reflect on the impact it may have on working practices.
	2D: Improving pathways into the profession through apprenticeships, Jackie Chelin, University of the West of England and Luke Stevens-Burt, CILIP Hear about LARKIM trailblazer group and share your ideas about the promotion and development of apprenticeships, creating new pathways into the profession and building foundations for transferable skills.
	and the profession and banding realitations for transferable stills.
	1

14:55 – 15:25	TEA and meet our sponsors
15:25 – 15:55	PLENARY SESSION
	"You want me to read! Why do I need to do that?!" Genevieve Clarke, The Reading Agency Colleges around the country have been using programmes run by The Reading Agency such as Reading Ahead, Quick Reads, World Book Night and Reading Well for several years. Genevieve celebrates the success of library staff in encouraging their students and teaching colleagues to think differently about reading.
15:55-16:00	MEET OUR PLATINUM SPONSOR OPEN ATHENS
	Blake Anderson, Open Athens
16:00 - 16:20	Presentation time with the BPA winners
10.00 10.10	December 1 and 1 a
16:20 – 16:40	Presentation of the Jeff Cooper Award
	Why I founded CoLRiC
	Jeff Cooper, founder CoLRiC
16:40 – 16:50	CLOSE OF THE CONFERENCE, LESSONS LEARNED AND THANK
	YOU FROM THE CHAIRS
16:50 – 18:00	Cocktail reception
18:00	CLOSE

Diamond sponsor

Platinum sponsors

CoLRiC sponsors

